The infantry was sacrificed to save the big guns. The Russian losses are appalling. They had no time to bury their dead, but the Germans gathered up the wounded.

The Germans are being redistributed for another important movement, the objective of which is withheld. Russians are reported widely scattered, miles separating some forces. Despite this they are reported retreating to resist and further German advance into Poland.

Legislative Resume

Special Appropriations More Than Ate Up Savings

(By W. O. SMITH)

Outside of the prohibition law and a few others, it cannot be said that for real constructive legislation the 1915 legislature equalled the session of two years ago. The principal reason for this was that there was no demand or need for any sweeping changes in the laws.

However, there has been a great deal of good accomplished by the session just closed. Some of the objectionable features were removed from the important laws enacted by the last session, and many amendments were passed making these laws more workable.

The committee made many cuts and reductions early in the session, particularly on the appropriations for the state institutions, and it looked as if a record in reducing taxes was to be made. During the rush and excitement of the last few days of the session, the saving made by the ways and means committee during weeks of hard work, was more than offset by numerous special appropriation bills which were slipped in and passed by the House.
